A Shining New Star On The Country Horizon

THE MINUTE CLIFF DORSEY LAUNCHES INTO A SONG, it is clear that he will be a lasting figure on the country music scene. That rich baritone squeezes every ounce of emotion out of a song, taking the listener on a journey with him as he weaves his lyrical tales on stage. His style draws from the traditional tones of Presley, Cash, and Haggard. The hardworking Florida native has been playing and singing for years, carving out a career through sweat, passion, and ingenuity - building a steady fan base. Honing his skills performing in church, Cliff quickly moved on to clubs and festivals and anywhere else he could find to play, and has become a seasoned professional adept at entertaining crowds of any size in the years since.

His first album, 321, yielded the fan favorite "If Whiskey Was A Woman". His sophomore album, Hurricane Blues, featuring the aptly titled, "Honky Tonk Dream"— a retro-tinged track about the ups and downs of chasing the troubadour's dream. Cliff just put the finishing touches on his brand new debut EP "New Neon" on Black Sheep Label, which was produced by Zach Swon and Colton Swon (The Swon Brothers). The first release, "Raise One" is a rich, anthem-style tribute to the hard-working people in this country who put the needs of others before their own. The song will be airing on radio this Fall and is sure to raise his profile. As one of its brightest new stars, Cliff is sure to light up your room and stage with his tailor-made-for-country-music voice and his neo-traditional sound.

Cliff's family heritage runs deep. He comes from three generations of railroad men who've devoted their lives to transportation history.

The young artist is an avid outdoorsman and he enjoys hunting and fishing.

He performed "The Star-Spangled Banner" at The Gator Nationals for more than 125k people when he was just in his teens.

The Black Sheep Label EP debut, New Neon, produced by Zach Swon & Colton Swon (The Swon Brothers) will release this year.
